

Editorial

ATBU Journal of Environmental Technology (A'JET) Volume 9, Number 2 of December 2016 is finally out. In this edition, Shuaibu, Musa and Idowu provided an efficient framework to sustainable management of refuse collection and evaluation in a developing city of Bauchi State in Nigeria. Dahiru investigated the relationship between ultrasonic pulse velocity test result and concrete cube strength. Haruna and Keftin assessed the culture of construction health and safety of selected firms in Abuja, Nigeria. Similarly, assessment of some key issues that affect the acceptance of building information modelling was carried out by Usman, Abubakar and Ibrahim. Ibrahim, Okoli and Dahiru carried out a comparative study of the properties of ordinary Portland cement concrete and binary concrete containing metakaolin made from kankara kaolin in Nigeria. Gambo and Datukun presented a comparative study of Valuers' registration process in Nigeria and South Africa. Ehiemere, Ogbuefi and Awum investigated customer satisfaction amongst users of estate surveying and valuation professional services with a special consideration to size of firm. Household's ethnic background and crowding in public housing multifamily apartment in Lagos was examined by Adebayo and Iweka. Babawale in a review approach, examined critical issues in making of expert witness from the valuers' perspective.

We wish our numerous subscribers an impactful reading as you diligently read through and thorough this edition.

Y. O. Sadiq

Acknowledgments

We still envisage that a reputable external academic publisher might be found, sooner than later, to adjudge and assume publishing of A'JET. The intervention valve of Tertiary Education Trust Fund (Tetfund) is, on the other hand, now being turned on - thanks to information from the office of the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Academic matters), Prof. Abdullahi Umar.

Arc. Dr. Abdullahi Abubakar's complimentary review of the journal articles is herein again appreciated, as Arc. Prof. (Mrs.) Bogda Ogunsote and Dr. Adegbenga Adeyemi are not left out.

We also respectfully thank our distinguished other reviewers, home and abroad, for their time and thoroughness.

The patience and promptness of African Journal Online (AJOL), our South African Partners, do spur us on, lending fulcrum to scholarship online!

Y. O. Sadiq