

Editorial

The volume 15 of the Nigerian School Library Association is published for the use of all stakeholders in school library media programme. It is a useful addition to the existing literature in the field school librarianship. The volume features articles on reading, use of the library, information technology and job satisfaction and performance skills.

The NSLJ is virtual through the indexing services of AJOL and upload to the AJOL and the Nigerian School Library Journal website. The journal is supported by grant from TeTfund which has guaranteed its regular publishing.

We expect all stakeholders in the field of school librarianship to patronise the Journal by publishing their scholarly and empirical papers in the journal. We have the plan to publish for the entire African region.

I commend the volume 15 to all readers for purchase and inclusion in their library resource collections.
