

Editorial

I have the pleasure to write the editorial to the volume 19 No 1, March, 2020 of the Nigerian School Library Journal to be published for the use of all stakeholders in school librarianship and other educational libraries. The volume consist of eight articles that are research based, contributed by experienced librarians.

The scope covers staff training and development, leadership styles and job effectiveness, digital library services, Reading habit and use of the library among young adults, web search skills for library service utilisation, managing conduct disorder among adolescents with intellectual disability, information resources and school library services in private schools, and soft skills and information literacy of school librarians and quality reference service delivery in school libraries.

This volume will be a valuable resource addition to our collections in school and private libraries. The practicing librarians, researchers and student librarians will find the volume very useful in many areas: research, literature search and library practice among others. The article on therapies promotes inclusive education in schools.

The Journal is indexed by AJOL and it is on open source to facilitate on-line access and utilisation. I commend the journal for the purchase of all as a premier school library journal in African region.

Prof. David F. Elaturoti
Editor-in-Chief